FOR NATIONAL SERVICE EXECUTIVES

Starting summer 2019

This unique, customized learning experience is designed for national service staff. The innovative curriculum is composed of three one-week courses that are offered over three consecutive summers. Participants who complete the course earn a certificate in nonprofit and national service management from the University of Washington.

Offered since 2001, the course attracts commission staff, program staff, state office staff, VISTA program staff, Senior Corps directors and national direct staff, among others, who want to deepen their understanding of the issues they face and find creative, workable solutions for them.

The Evans School of Public Policy and Governance consistently ranks in the top 10 graduate schools in the country for public policy. Located on the Seattle campus of the UW, it has been training and supporting public servants and others in the nonprofit sector with world-class faculty members and a comprehensive, cross-disciplinary curriculum for more than 55 years.

The course offers unique benefits as it is:

- Tailored to our work
- Delves into real-world problems and examples
- Offers more in-depth study than other trainings on these topics
